HAWAII'S FRIENDS.

A large portion of the native population unfortunately seems to entertain the idea that any one who has the temerity to differ with them, or to express an opinion, no matter how honestly, in opposition to their own, is anti-Hawaiian and an enemy to the Kingdom. It is also unfortunate that they accept, as a proof of sincere and disinterested friendship, every mark of applause accorded them. This is surprising considering that they have been so often victimized by their leaders. Those who have promised most and have made the greatest about little have always been the ones to win the Hawaiian heart and have invariably been the first to show themselves unworthy of confidence.

Flattery is an insult to common sense, and yet there are those who do not hesitate to encourage every word or act whether it be right or wrong, their object being to ingratiate themselves into the good graces of the natives. The loudest mouth usually accompanies the weakest arm, and while the former may encourage to destruction the latter is powerless to rescue. He is your best friend who has the courage to tell you of your faults, and the person who hesitates to speak the truth, no matter how distasteful it may be, is the real enemy. He can be called by no milder name who sees the approach of danger and will speak not a warning word.

The Hawaiian Kingdom is to-day drifting, as it has been for two years past, around the treacherous edge of a financial and political maelstrom. The persons at the helm are neither patriotic nor skillful. One adverse puff of wind, one wrong turn of the wheel may sweep the craft to inevitable destruction. To let it drift as it now is will certainly prove fatal. A strong and steady hand, a true and patriotic heart and honesty of purpose are necessary to again reach the smooth and tranquil waters that feel not the presence of the frightful gulf. Recent actions of the present Administration go to prove that we are drifting all too rapidly toward a political vortex. Self-styled friends may pronounce it false. If greater credence be given to their words than to those of the observing and intelligent majority, we can only hope that the eyes of those most concerned may be opened before it is too late. The danger can only be avoided by the will of the present Administration is to perish.

The men and the newspapers who have been most active in denouncing wrong are looked upon by the Hawaiians with the greatest distrust, and unless there be a change of feeling speedily the day is not far distant when regret will be expressed that the oft spoken words of warning were not heeded.

Those who deemed that the coming political fight will be one for "place" merely, will find themselves mistaken. The people and their leaders—in fact all who are opposed to the Government are making the fight upon the principle of good Government. If they win, which is not at all unlikely, the immediate result will be the substitution of good Government for bad, of justice for injustice, of honesty for dishonesty, and of patriotism for ambition and personal interests. The Administration leaders are already attempting to drag those who are opposed, to its own level by insinuating that at best all difference of political opinion is moulded by the sordid interests of those hangers-on, who have called into use the political terms of "Ins" and "Outs." In the present instance the fight will not be between the "Ins" and "Outs," but between the Tax-payers and the "Ins."

The Leper Hospital of Scutari.

The Journal des Debats publishes a letter from its Constantinople correspondent giving a very vivid description of the "Miskin Hané," or Leper Hospital, at Scutari. He says: "There are now few of these establishments left, and it is not too much to say that in the one which I have just visited human misery seems to have attained its highest pitch. I saw numbers of human beings, sightless, their faces distorted out of all shape, their hands and toes having dropped off, their voice gone, breathing with desperate effort, their skin peeling off and black as that of a mummy, insensible to pain when pricked in certain parts of the body. Their feet and flanks are covered with horrible sores through which what is left to them of life ebbs away. Their attitude is one of profound apathy and exhaustion, and I could not help being reminded of the saying of the leper of Aosta: 'Endless seem the nights when the mind is dwelling upon a desperate present and a hopeless future.'"

"And yet amid all these horrible scenes there live married couples and children, the latter of whom free from disease as yet, play about like other children, regardless of the spectacle which they have before them. One of these wretched men, not more than thirty, but among the most afflicted, has a very pretty wife, and a child who is fresh and rosy like a young Cupid. A young fellow of twenty-five, but who is so cadaverous that he might be one hundred, a mere walking corpse, has a wife fifteen years older than himself, and herself ravaged by the same disease. This woman was married before, but her first husband put her away when he noticed symptoms of leprosy. He married again and had a child, which at his death he confided to the care of his first wife, who reared it. This child grew up, and has himself since married and had children, all of them living together in this hospital.

"It is said that the disease is not contagious, as the governor, who has been there forty years, has a wife and six children who enjoy the best of health. The brother of one of the lepers, who is a soldier in a neighboring barracks, comes to see him whenever he can get leave, and he has not caught the disease, while Dr. Zambaco comes twice a week and handles the lepers with perfect impunity. Dr. Zambaco, who is one of the leading Greek physicians of Constantinople, is of the opinion that it is not at all contagious, and that, though occasionally inherited, it is more often acquired, the main cause being privation and want. Among the lepers at the Miskin Hané is one who owes his malady to having been struck by lightning, while a second became a leper after a sudden fright. But in the East the conviction that leprosy is contagious still has very firm root, and for this reason at Mecca, while the lepers are given food and clothing, they never receive any money, the belief being that it would spread the disease when put into circulation again. So, at Scutari, the lepers are literally inclosed within a living tomb, as the Miskin Hané is the center of the vast cemetery in which so many millions of dead have been interred since Constantinople was first built, and is surrounded by the splendid cypress trees, the dark green of which contrasts so well with the blue outline of the Sea of Marmora and the shores of Asia Minor in the distance. The hospital itself is a quadrilateral about one hundred and twenty feet long, with only one story. To the right of the entrance is a small mosque, in which the lepers recite their five prayers a day, this being their only distraction. In the center is the courtyard upon which open twenty rooms, and it is in these that twenty-seven sufferers drag on a miserable existence. Their rooms are lighted with a small window, with wooden bars, while in the way of furniture there is nothing but a mattress thrown upon the ground and a few common utensils. More abject misery it is impossible to conceive, and it is made all the more poignant by the presence in the courtyard of a tomb erected to a leper who was said to be a saint. This tomb is covered with knots of ribbon, placed there by persons who have come to be cured of some disease. Behind another lattice in the courtyard is a small building, and the local tradition is that any person who has the courage to join hands with a female leper and set the grinding-stone in motion without looking at the water as it runs off will have his wish granted, always provided that he has first deposited a coin on the stone.

"The Miskin Hané Hospital was founded by the Sultan Selim, and for a long time it received a government subsidy of 20 piastres per month for each ward, and at that time this sum was sufficient to keep lepers in comparative comfort. But the grant has not been increased, and the value of money is so much less than it was that the patients are in a very miserable condition. The charity of the passers-by is, therefore, well bestowed, and Dr. Zambaco is taking steps toward the erection of a new hospital in which these unfortunate beings might be treated with some chance of cure."

What is the Matter With Russia?

The empire of Russia is a bad case of national dyspepsia. The treasury is short of funds, and the army costs $60,000 a day to feed. Then the army is so full of nihilists that it can no more be trusted than the stomach of a man who has chronic dyspepsia. We don't know what to do about Russia; but as for the man with chronic dyspepsia, let him take Brown's Iron Bitters. That made Mr. Chandler, of Clinton, Iowa, a new man. He tried it after other remedies failed. Buy a bottle of your druggist to-day.
